SPARKS' PERSPECTIVE

*Ron Sparks
Commissioner*

When you are a parent, there is nothing more important than the health and future of your children. Some people do not realize the crucial role that agriculture can play in helping Alabama kids reach their full potential.

Obesity and diabetes have become predominant health problems in recent years making Alabama one of the unhealthiest states in the nation. In 2004, I talked with Dr. Joe Morton, Superintendent of the Alabama Board of Education, about these issues and he appointed a committee to find out what can be done to help our kids. I serve as Chairman of the Nutrition Subcommittee of the Statewide Committee to Review the State of Health of America's Youth with Particular Emphasis on Alabama's Youth. That's a long name for a committee, but it's not just a string of words. We met to find realistic ways to improve the health of our children.

What the committee came up with is a list of simple but effective changes that can be implemented to have a positive impact on the health of Alabama's kids. Recently, the Alabama Board of Education adopted the health report provided by the Nutrition Subcommittee. I want to commend Dr. Morton and the state school board for the courage and leadership they have shown by doing this.

I hope that with changes like replacing soft drinks with juice, adding Alabama produce to the school menus, changing food preparation methods, and encouraging physical education classes, we can improve the lives of our children. I understand that drink and snack machines can have a great economic impact on a school, but we need to be providing healthier options in those machines so we can raise healthier kids.

Not only can agriculture help kids get proper nutrition, but groups like FFA and 4-H give young people an opportunity to experience working with agriculture. Events like the Alabama Junior Livestock Expo provide an excellent learning experience for our youth. The Department of Agriculture & Industries is encouraging young people in their agricultural pursuits by sponsoring entrants from around the state in the Junior Expo every year. It is estimated that over 400 FFA and 4-H members participate from communities just like yours. The future of farming is in the hands of young men and women like these.

Please encourage your children and students to start noticing how agriculture can improve their lives. With only about 45,000 family farms remaining in Alabama, activities for young people interested in agriculture are more important than ever.

The 2005 Rodeo Roundup

On Thursday, March 10, 2005, a number of agribusiness leaders enjoyed a feast of delicious Alabama products at the Alabama Agribusiness Council's Annual "Rodeo Roundup" held at the Montgomery State Farmers Market Open Pavilion.

The Alabama Agribusiness Council (AAC) was founded in 1989 by a group of agribusiness leaders and has developed into an umbrella organization for all aspects of agriculture. To successfully address the complex challenges facing agriculture, Alabama agribusinesses need

Test Program for Country of Origin Labeling

The pilot program for Country of Origin Labeling on fruit and vegetables in Alabama grocery stores has begun. The Department of Agriculture and Industries and the Alabama Grocer's Association have been working closely in the last few months to implement a project to test the feasibility of labeling produce in grocery stores. The testing will be conducted in eight grocery stores for up to 90 days in the Birmingham area. The participants include: Associated Grocery Stores, Bruno's Stores, Piggly Wiggly, and Western Supermarkets. All of the participating stores have voluntarily agreed to apply country of origin labeling on all loose produce in an effort to give consumers a choice.

"Alabama raises some of the safest and most economical food in the world and farmers in other countries may not have the same high standards as we do here at home," stated Sparks. "I want to do anything I can to protect our families and our food supply. I commend these businesses for volunteering to be a part of this test program."

to promote their views in a unified, consistent manner. The AAC brings together agriculture's diverse interests for the good of the entire agribusiness industry in the state.

Prior to the Roundup, Lieutenant Governor Lucy Baxley and Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries Ron Sparks addressed AAC members at their annual meeting. Lieutenant Governor Baxley and Commissioner Sparks both encouraged the AAC to continue their unified effort to promote and develop Alabama's #1 Industry, Agriculture. For more information about the AAC call 334/281-5513.

Winn-Dixie Promotes Alabama Products

The Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries and Winn-Dixie are proud to announce a newly formed partnership designed to showcase Alabama home-grown fruits, vegetables, and value-added food items. Joey Medina, Winn-Dixie Stores, Inc. VP of Western Region, noted his company's commitment to its customers and to Alabama "home pride ... home support ... and home-grown."

For over 50 years Winn-Dixie has been a part of the Alabama community with much pride being taken in the quality of products and services provided in served communities

Commissioner Sparks, in recognizing the partnership, stated that he was excited about the opportunity to increase the number of Alabama products carried in Winn-Dixie stores. The Alabama promotion will start in the Montgomery region the latter part of April with featured Alabama products and a store-wide effort to support home-grown.

Invitations to a special Winn-Dixie buyer's meeting will soon be mailed to Alabama growers and Alabama food processors. This April 21st meeting will provide a forum for the exchange of information and to support Alabama agriculture, our state's economy, and delivering quality Alabama products in our hometown stores.

For more information contact John C. Gamble at 334/240-7245.
